Hood bogus bill report corrected

Bay St. Louis Police Department Investigator Murray Ladner Friday reported a Waveland woman charged Wednesday with uttering forgery is not accused of passing a bogus bill at a local convenience store as reported in Thursday's Sea Coast Echo.

Bay St. Louis police Wednesday charged Mrs. Elizabeth L. Hood and an Ocean Springs man with uttering forgery in connection with a counterfeit $20 bill which turned up Tuesday night at Delta service station on US-90 in Bay St. Louis.

"They allegedly passed a counterfeit $20 bill Tuesday night at Delta Service Station on US-90," the Thursday Sea Coast Echo report stated.

Ladner confirmed Friday that Mrs. Hood did not visit that store Tuesday night.

"The newspaper report should have read 'He' rather than 'They' the investigator explained.

Mrs. Hood also stated Thursday she did not accompany the man to the Delta store.

Mrs. Hood told The Sea Coast Echo she had given the man a $20 bill about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday in payment for two cartons of cigarettes he had delivered to her in Waveland.

A clerk at the Delta store called police about 7:30 p.m. after she apparently had accepted a bogus $20 bill, Mrs. Hood said.

Police said Friday an investigation into the incident is continuing.

A preliminary hearing on the matter is scheduled before Bay St. Louis City Judge James H. Smith.

Mrs. Hood was released under $2,000 bond.

A BUNCH OF KIDS—Holding two of six Nubian milk goat kids early Saturday morning in her barn is Dorothy Straughan of Firetower Road. She reports both of her goats gave birth last Monday with one having the usual two kids, but remarkably the other gave birth to four. She and her husband, James Straughan, are keeping a close watch on the kids to make sure they stay healthy. At only six days old, the kids are already looking like little goats. A multi-colored coat and when mature are much larger than common barnyard goats. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

High cost could sink spray sewage project

By NAN PATTON EHRRBRIGHT
Waveland Regional Wastewater District members are saying "Yes, but..." to a proposed spray irrigation sewage treatment system that would serve Waveland, Bay St. Louis and, potentially, other areas of Hancock County.

While they favor a spray irrigation sewage treatment system, they are concerned about costs of such a project.

The spray irrigation system project could cost some $10 million compared to $3 million for an extension of city outfall lines to the Jourdan River.

Wastewater district members backed off from the extension system, which they originally proposed, after a public hearing in November elicited protests from a number of Jourdan residents concerned about pollution of the river.

Another public hearing will be held at 7 p.m. March 27 at Waveland American Legion Post No. 77 on Coleman Avenue.

On Wednesday both John Longo, wastewater chairman and Waveland mayor, and Larry Bennett, wastewater member and Bay St. Louis mayor, said they wanted assurances that the innovative spray method would be 85 percent federally-funded.

John McCarty of the State Bureau of Pollution Control said he could not guarantee funding at that level, but felt prospects were good.

"I don't think there's any question that land treatment is the best system," Wastewater District Administrator Ethel Schott said.

"But the question is, can we afford it?" Longo asked. "If we can't afford it, we don't have a project in my opinion because it won't be cost effective," she said.

Longo noted that the difference in grant monies would make the local share—15 percent for spray irrigation or 45 percent for outfall extensions—not too burdensome for taxpayers.

"But if we don't have full commitment of 85 percent in federal funds, or if the figure could be changed afterwards, that scares the life out of me."

"Once we commit ourselves and let bids and break ground, if that figure hasn't been firmed up we're sunk for the difference. We can't back out," Longo noted.

McCarty said a grant would define the funding level, and the district would have the grant before ground was broken.

"I'm not committing anyone to anything until I know what the bottom line is before I go to the Bay Council or any Bay citizen," Bennett added.

"We can't back this system until you want it," McCarty said.

"We'll have to go to EPA and justify it on other means than costs."

"I think this system will serve the county more than a discharge on the Jourdan River. Let's don't just look at what the cost is now. We also have to weigh heavily what's down the road," he said.

McCarty also noted that appropriations for construction grants are available only through 1985.

"You're only looking at '84 and '85 monies," he cautioned. "If you delay, there may not be any monies at all."

There was general consensus that if the wastewater district proceeded with an outfall extension system, it might be faced with a lawsuit by Jourdan River residents.

Ray Eaton of Lewis-Eaton Partnership of Jackson reported that International Paper Co. is taking a second look at the prospect of leasing land to the district for a spray irrigation site.

He said he was also contacting Crown Zellerbach Co., and Hancock County School District has given permission for soil borings on three tracts of school district land.

Approximately 700 acres of land would be needed for the spray irrigation system.

"We're at a point now where we can definitely show sites and, depending on the economics, can proceed with this type of program," Eaton said.

"If we can finance a spray irrigation system and it's going to be 85 percent federal money and it's going to satisfy the needs of the county, then that's fine," Longo said.

"But if they pull any federal money, we'll have to go to an alternative."

Waveland Utility Department receives counterfeit $20

By ELLIS CUEVAS
The Waveland Utility Department received a counterfeit $20 bill from an unknown source this week, according to Robert (Poochy) Tartavouille, investigator.

Tartavouille on Friday said, "A teller at Merchants Bank spotted the bogus bill in a deposit made by the utility department."

In describing the bogus bill Tartavouille stated, "It could very easily be passed in a place without too much light. The area around the photo of Jackson is darker than a normal bill and the letter 'y' on the word 'Twenty' under the picture is not fully developed."

The Waveland investigator reported the bogus bill matter is being further investigated.

Another bogus $20 bill was passed at a Bay St. Louis service station on Tuesday and is being investigated by Bay St. Louis police.

Kiln man reveals his role in contraband weapon bust

A Kiln man who was the pilot of an airplane seized in New York City with contraband weapons bound for Poland says he acted as a federal undercover agent, an Alabama newspaper revealed Thursday.

In an exclusive interview with reporter Sandra Baxley Taylor of 'The Mobile Register,' Joe Haas, 39, of Kiln, stated, "I may as well admit it. On a deal like this it's obvious the Polish government has got it figured out who burned them—and the crooks know... I was the one who did it."

U.S. Customs in New York on Feb. 21 seized the $1 million load of weapons destined for Poland, according to a report by The Associated Press.

The Convair 440 jet was being loaded with 100,000 rounds of ammunition, 500 Ruger semi-automatic rifles and other gear, customs officials said.

Charged with violating the Arms Control Act were Solomon Schwartz, 48, of Monsey, N.Y., and Leonard Berg, 48, of the Bronx, the report states.

Authorities believe the cargo may have been destined for terrorists, though it was officially being sent to an unnamed Polish government official, the report adds.

The Mobile newspaper report says Haas is a modern-day soldier of fortune who has waged a personal battle against drug trafficking for most of his adult life.

For 12 years he's worked in undercover drug operations for the government, the report claims.

He has testified under an alias in the past to protect his identity and has appeared on CBS' '60 Minutes.' For that appearance, Haas spoke from behind a screen and his voice was disguised, the AP states.

"People still don't know my face," he told The Mobile newspaper.

Haas' undercover role in the weapons deal has not been disclosed by the government, though he is named in an affidavit describing a court-sanctioned eavesdropping device placed in a room at the Airport Hilton Hotel at New Orleans International Airport on Feb. 2, the AP report says.

Haas praised U.S. Customs in New Orleans and agent Bill Massengale, who headed up that city's end of the investigation, the report states.

On Feb. 2, Massengale placed the eavesdropping device in the airport hotel and taped a three-hour conversation that involved Haas and Schwartz, the AP says.

Schwartz is the director of Global Research and Development of Manhattan, N.Y. He and Berg were arrested at H.L.R. Security Electronics Ltd., the Bronx, a paramilitary police equipment dealer. Berg is listed as president of the company, Schwartz is a consultant, according to press reports.

The tape reportedly has Schwartz making final arrangements for the smuggling venture. Haas was told to find a plane. Schwartz reportedly said he would return to Poland and pin down the deal with Polish officials.

Haas readily admitted his role in the weapons deal in the interview with the Mobile newspaper.

"Yeah, I did it. And I'll tell you why. When you get an Eastern communist bloc country buying American-made guns, it's a pinch they aren't taking them to church. We hung our necks out but we did it for a reason," Haas said. "You kill people with guns."

Haas said in the interview that he realized early in the undercover operation he was risking his anonymity, but he said, "It was too big to back off. I knew when we set up the bugging my name would be on affidavits."

Haas said the undercover operation went as planned.

"We had total control, for a change," he told the reporter. "There were a couple of times in conversation during our meetings when I got kind of nervous. I didn't know if they were believing us or if they were about to blow me away."

The government became involved last December when Haas said he first got a call at his Bayou La Batre home on Hwy. 90 from a contact telling him two New Yorkers were looking for someone to smuggle guns out of the country, the AP reports.

It climaxed when U.S. Customs agents roared toward Haas' plane as it sat at Kennedy International Airport on Feb. 21.

A spokesman for the Polish government in Warsaw, Jerzy Urban, ridiculed the allegation that the shipment was bound for a Polish official. Urban told the AP the accusation was either "rubbish or a provocation."

U.S. law enforcement agencies reportedly turned to the possibility that the cargo was destined for terrorist groups.

Authorities determined, however, that the arms were not intended for Solidarity, the outlawed Polish labor group, the AP report adds.

Hancock School System lists winning spellers

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT

Hancock County School District participants for the May 3-4 Gulf Coast Spelling Bee were selected at a district contest Thursday and Friday at Charles B. Murphy Elementary School.

Contest Chairman Helen Mestayer announced the first and second place winners, respectively:

—First grade: Lindsay Moran, Hancock North Central Elementary, and Melody Lord, Charles B. Murphy;

—Second grade: Brandy McNease, Hancock North Central, and Jenise Baker, Gulfview Elementary;

—Third grade: Gene Moran, Gulfview, and Christy Bounds, Charles B. Murphy;

—Fourth grade: Eric Necaise, Hancock North Central, and Michelle Daugherty, Charles B. Murphy;

—Fifth grade: Erik York, Hancock North Central, and Karen Osborne, Gulfview;

—Sixth grade: Noel Nami, Hancock North Central, and David Cameron, Charles B. Murphy;

—Seventh grade: Robin Marshall, Charles B. Murphy, and Gina Cuevas, Hancock North Central Junior High; and —Eighth grade: Sherry Shaw, Hancock North Central Junior High, and Wayne Oullie, Charles B. Murphy.

These 16 students will represent Hancock County at the Gulf Coast contest.

The district contest followed contests in each school to select the top two spellers from each grade level of each school.

Other participants at the district contest included Travis Ritter, Freda Peters, Kendall Mitchell, Tricia Alexander, Eunice Burton, Dorian Acker, Leo Acker, Sheila Furey, Chrystal Walters and Tanis Breland, all from Charles B. Murphy Elementary School.

Also, David Morris, Angela Tuttle, Brandon Carver, Jackie Woods, Maria

Mitchell, Launa Bindi, Roger Sullivan, Dwight Guillot, Van Guaraggi, Sandra Dean, Hope Fricke, Brent Lusick and Thomas Williams, all from Gulfview Elementary School.

And Joseph Camp, Chris Maniscalco, Betsy Ahlers, Sean McGee, Sammy Bass, Andrea Ladner and Russell Lee, all from Hancock North Central Elementary School; and Kendra Spiers and Sharon Koenen, both from Hancock North Central Junior High School.

The Gulf Coast Spelling Bee in May will be sponsored by Hancock County School District and Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District.

The Gulf Coast contest will be held at the Bay St. Louis Junior High School auditorium.

Participating in the Gulf Coast Spelling Bee, Mestayer said, will be Hancock County School District, Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District, Enunciation Catholic School of Kiln, Bay Catholic School of Bay St. Louis, Christ Episcopal Day School of Bay St. Louis, Coast Episcopal High School of Pass Christian and Gulfport Municipal Separate School District.

Also, St. Clare Catholic School of Waveland, St. Paul's Catholic School of Pass Christian, St. Stanislaus School of Bay St. Louis, Ocean Springs Municipal School District, St. Thomas Catholic School of Long Beach, St. Martin's East Elementary School of Ocean Springs, Ocean Springs Christian School and Harrison County School District.

North Bay to launch 525 balloons March 19

North Bay Elementary School students will launch 525 helium-filled balloons at 1 p.m. Monday, March 19, as part of a national Writing Pals Balloon Contest sponsored by Weekly Reader, a classroom newspaper.

"A message attached to each balloon explains the project and asks that the finder return it to North Bay," Principal Roger James said. James said Weekly Reader will present a $500 prize to the school that gets back the message that has traveled the farthest distance.

"In addition, 100 runner-up prizes of free books will be awarded," he said. Since the annual balloon launch began, Weekly Reader has furnished about 2½ million free balloons to schools participating in the Writing Pals program, a pen pal program in which Weekly Reader pairs classes across the country.

According to James, the balloon launch will be the climax of North Bay's year-long participation in Writing Pals. The goal of the program, he said, is to motivate children to write to and become familiar with students in other parts of the country. Weekly Reader suggests numerous ways to generate excitement among the student participants as the messages are returned.

Students are encouraged to follow weather reports and predict where balloons will land.

Other suggestions include: —Reading letters over the public address system; —Telephoning some of the respondents;

—Having students answer all letters;

—Setting up a large map in a hallway and attaching letters and cards to their points of origin to show how far balloons traveled; and which closes at five o'clock and an apartment complex where people 'rev up' at five when they come home," Martinovich retorted.

—Having classes prepare reports about areas they hear from. "North Bay students will write to every person who sends back a message card from our balloons," James said.

Commissioner August Scafidi said he didn't feel all apartment complexes were filled with 'riffraff' and the complex, properly controlled, could be an asset to the community.

The commissioners voted unanimously to rezone the property from R-1 (single-family residential) to R-3 (multi-family residential), with the provision that if the project has not commenced within six months from the time the city council approves a zoning change, it will revert back to R-1 status.

The property is located one block from US-90, which is zoned for commercial use.

In other city council business Mayor Larry Bennett advised the council that the Bay St. Louis Police Department is setting up its own photography darkroom.

"Police officials feel they can cut costs to a bare minimum by developing their own photographs," he said.

The city council also:

—Took under advisement bids for construction, insulation, heating/air-conditioning and pest control for homes being renovated under the housing rehabilitation project;

—Approved the claims docket; and —Set public hearings for April 3 regarding cleanup of property at 504 Main St. and 347 Main St.

Girl Scouting helps discovery of new worlds

Some may argue that there are no new worlds to discover: We've walked on the moon, shuttled through space and conquered the mysteries of the deep.

But today's Girl Scout might disagree. That's because she's been busy finding new and exciting worlds every day through her participation in Girl Scouting.

What worlds can a Girl Scout discover? How about aerospace technology and mountain climbing? Or some more down-to-earth pursuits like camping and group sports?

Perhaps the best part about the new world a girl finds in Girl Scouting is the opportunity to share her delight of discovery with others. Girl Scout activities encourage friendship and teamwork and foster global awareness and understanding that link girls across the street or across the ocean.

By taking an active part in serving her community, a Girl Scout learns how local concerns may affect the world at large, and how she may contribute to finding solutions.

The wonderful world of Girl Scouting isn't just for girls. Women and men who serve as adult volunteers discover their own new worlds in the support and guidance they lend to the Girl Scout movement.

Girl Scout Week, March 11-17, serves to remind us that for 72 years, girls have been having fun, gaining solid learning experiences and enriching their world through Girl Scouting. We applaud their enthusiasm and trust they'll continue to find new worlds as Girl Scouts.

Quotables by Cuevas

Congratulations are in order for three local law enforcement officers who graduated from the Laurel Police Academy last Friday.

David Murtagh took top honors in the class with Judy Childs finishing third and Mike Pearson coming in third.

Murtagh is a Hancock County deputy sheriff, Childs, a Bay patrolman, and Pearson a member of the Waveland Police Department.

We are fortunate in having law officers of this caliber with our local police departments.

We know the sheriff and police chiefs are proud of the outstanding job these officers did at the academy.

We received a telephone call from Pat Murphy Jr. who is seeking old photographs of the Bay St. Louis Beachfront.

Murphy would like to find some of the old photos and have copies made so that they could be placed on display at the Beachfront Festival scheduled in June.

He hopes to make a large display board so everyone can see how the Bay Beachfront was many years ago.

Murphy, who said he would return all photographs can be reached at 467-4515.

The warm weather has given an urge to all gardeners, both flower and vegetable growers to get started.

Some have been sharpening their shovels and others changing the oil in their tillers. The only problems seems to be the fact that everytime it appears to dry up a bit, down comes a shower.

We are hoping it will dry up enough so folks will be able to work the ground and get crops going.

It really improves a yard's appearance when it includes nice flower beds and or a vegetable garden.

This goes along with improving the whole community and everyone benefits.

SOUTH MISSISSIPPIANS SPEAK OUT

The responses to my 12th annual questionnaire are coming in by the thousands and, although the final tabulations aren't available yet, many people are attaching additional comments to explain their views.

This year, I pretty much limited the questions to budget items and asked for responses on whether more, the same, or less money should be spent in 10 major categories this year as compared with last year.

Then I asked whether the budget deficit should be reduced by cutting spending or by raising taxes.

Here is a sample of the comments received so far:

* A man in Biloxi wrote, "A negative response to every category of your questionnaire appears radical, but I seriously believe that a substantial reduction in spending in every area could be achieved without seriously affecting the operation as a whole."

* A couple in Saucier wrote on the subject of education, "Needs more spending, especially in the line of teaching vocational trades for both boys and girls."

* A man from Hattiesburg wrote on the subject of the national defense, "We were the strongest at the end of World War II, and we should have kept it that way. Will cost to build it back up."

* A woman in Lucedale wrote on the subject of space research, "...about the space deal, taxpayers are getting tired of seeing their money being wasted when that thing is shot up in the air while people on earth...are going without the things they need."

* A Picayune resident wrote, "...I marked both 'raising taxes' and 'cutting spending' to deal with the deficit. I definitely think both these actions have to be taken to lower such a tremendous deficit."

* A woman who signed her name but did not give her city wrote, "Taxes on land. Taxes on housing. Taxes on food. Taxes on clothes. Taxes on money you make to live. Taxes on money you spend for anything. Taxes are so high you can't afford to live in a nice place."

* A man from Leakesville wrote, "Spend less on foreign aid because people at home need the money."

* One Coast woman came up with a suggestion, "Let the taxpayers allot one dollar to support Medicaid and our senior citizens."

* A Gulfport man wrote, "I do not believe tax money is the issue on crime. Something must be done to eliminate all these appeals when there is no need for it. This reduces the function of a jury to nothing more than a mockery."

* A Hattiesburg man wrote, "Every one of these departments have a place in the budget and should have some financial support; however, until we cut the appropriations and demand that the management of these departments effect some economy and cut out waste, we will never get a handle on spending."

MEC

The Mississippi Economic Council commended Lauderdale County's Board of Supervisors for its decision to adopt the unit system of county road operations.

The Lauderdale County Board voted 4-1 to adopt the unit system, abandoning the practice of operating five different road programs in the county—one per district.

Lauderdale becomes the sixth county in the state to adopt the unit system. Lauderdale is also the largest county to have adopted the unit system. The council supports legislation requiring counties to operate road programs under the unit system.

"We have commended Lauderdale County's supervisors for their decision to adopt the unit system," said MEC President Bob Pittman. "Lauderdale County citizens should receive substantial benefits from this action."

Pittman said a recent MEC study indicated that a minimum of $27 million per year in tax dollars could be saved if every county operated under the unit system.

"Lauderdale County could become a model for all the state," Pittman added. "As the largest county operating under the unit system, Lauderdale County can become an example of effective county management and organization."

Employ Older Worker Week to be observed

March 11 through 17 has been designated as "National Employ the Older Worker Week."

Maybe that should be "More Experienced Worker Week" or perhaps "More Mature Worker Week."

Regardless, this week is for giving special recognition to those invaluable members of our labor force who have had the most time to absorb so very much of the wisdom and develop so much of the skill and superior work habits that no school can teach; only time and experience can.

Take a look at them. They have given so much and gained so much from the giving. If you are an employer or know of an employer who is looking for a mature, experienced, dependable, and loyal worker, then you or the employer you know should be seriously considering employing older workers.

If you need any assistance in contacting some potential older employees, by all means get in touch with the nearest office of the Mississippi State Employment Service.

In Bay St. Louis they're at the Valena C. Jones Building on Old Spanish Trail.

Hancock trustees adopt special ed policy

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT

A grading/graduation policy adopted Monday by the Hancock County School District trustees will affect special education students in elementary, junior high and high school.

Special Education Coordinator Jeannette Handschew, explaining the proposed policy to the trustees, noted that school districts are now required by the state to have graduation policies for special education students.

Under the newly-adopted policy, students in grades one through eight will receive grades reflecting their achievement at the instructional level on which they are functioning.

The A, B, C, D, F grading pattern will be used.

Both grades and grade levels will show on a report card.

A report card for a seventh grader might state, for instance, "The student is working at the third grade level in reading and has earned a B for this nine weeks."

For students in grades nine through 12, grades will depend upon the program each student is participating in, Handschew explained.

At the end of the eighth grade each special education student will have his or her Individual Education Plan, which is based on each student's strengths and weaknesses, reviewed by a committee made up of a special education teacher, school counselor, special education coordinator, parents and the student.

After the review, the student enters one of three programs—regular education, GED preparation or pre-vocational/vocational tract.

Special education students who successfully complete the regular education program will receive a high school diploma.

Of the 18 Carnegie units required for graduation, at least 16 must be academic.

Students must take four units of English, one unit of American history, two units of math, two units of science, one-half unit of civics and one-half unit of Mississippi history.

For these students, a resource room teacher works with the regular education teachers to support and assist the educational effort.

All instruction in the resource room is individual or small groups of no more than three students.

Instruction in the resource room will be directed toward providing students with the necessary skills to successfully complete regular education units.

In some instances, Handschew said, the regular program may be modified to help students succeed.

For instance, reading tests may be given orally to special education students, or students may be given more time to complete tests.

The resource room teacher may tape lessons for students and may help with homework assignments.

Students in the GED preparation program must take four units of English-related courses, one unit of American history, two units of math, one unit of science, one-half unit of American government, one-half unit of Mississippi history, one-half unit of civics, four units of GED preparation and four and one-half units of electives.

These units may be earned in a combination of regular education classes and special education classes.

Students in the GED preparation program will take the GED test during senior examination week. If they pass it, they will receive GED certificates during graduation exercises.

If they do not, they may return the next school year, provided they are not over the age of 20, for additional instruction, or they may receive a certificate stating "This student has successfully completed an I.E.P. Program."

The pre-vocational/vocational/life skills program consists of two separate phases.

The pre-vocational program, which Handschew hopes to implement for the 1984-85 school year, is designed for 14 and 15-year-old special education students who may be eligible for placement in a regular vocational training program.

Students may participate in this program for a maximum of two years.

During the first year, the student's vocational capabilities, limitations and interests are determined, and vocational exploration experiences are provided.

During the second year, the student takes part in vocational preparation activities.

According to the policy, a minimum of ten or maximum of 20 students may participate in the program.

Handschew said the district currently has 18 14-year-olds who would be suited for this program.

She said she has requested funding through the Vocational Education Division of the State Department of Education to hire a vocational education teacher to work with this project.

Students in this program receive instruction in vocational English and vocational math as well as instruction in five areas related to what is taught by a vocational training center.

Students who succeed in the pre-vocational program are integrated into the regular vocational program where they must take a minimum of six electives, either in the special education program or the regular education program during the next two years.

Students who cannot succeed in a regular education vocational program will be placed into a life skills program consisting of basic English grammar, life skills English, life skills mathematics, mathematics for consumers, social studies, science and social skills.

Students in the pre-vocational, vocational and life skills programs will receive certificates of completion.

"I'm really excited about this pre-vocational program," Handschew said, noting that many people don't understand how important English and math skills are to vocational education students as well as regular education students.

All special education students who successfully complete either the regular education program, the GED program or the pre-vocational/vocational/life skills program will be eligible to participate in graduation exercises, Handschew noted.

Hancock board approves special ed

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT

Hancock County School District's revised special education policy brings the district into compliance with requirements of state law resulting from a landmark court decision regarding handicapped students, according to Special Education Coordinator Jeannette Handschew.

Revisions to the policy, first adopted in May, 1979, were approved by the board of trustees Monday evening.

The revision policy includes provisions required as a result of the Mattie T. Decree, Handschew told the trustees.

The Mattie T. Decree resulted from a legal challenge brought by a group of parents of handicapped children regarding the educational methods and selection procedures used by Mississippi school districts to educate children with physical, emotional, mental or educational handicaps.

The decree took effect July 1, 1983.

The significant revisions, Handschew said, involve the referral-to-placement process, an in-school "Child Find" program and provisions related to students who are suspended or expelled from school.

In-school Child Find activities include:

—Hearing and vision screening for all first and fourth graders, and referral for those students who fail the tests;

—Followup of first graders who exhibit serious problems during readiness testing;

—Followup of students in the statewide testing program who show a great discrepancy between expected and measured achievement;

—Followup of students referred by parents or agencies; —Followup of referrals received through the State Department of Education Child Find Action Form.

—Inservice training for district personnel on Child Find and referral-to-placement procedures; —Followup as needed after a review of achievement test data and comparison with actual classroom performance and the child's age; and —Followup of children who are unsuccessful in Chapter I and other federal programs.

The policy provides that a student's instructional program will be reviewed by school personnel appointed by the superintendent whenever a student has failed any two subjects at the end of a semester.

It also provides for review of a student's instructional program if a student is suspended for more than ten days during a school year, is expelled or drops out of school and either has an apparent handicapping condition or is failing at least two subjects in the current or immediately preceding grading period.

Handschew said the district is continuing its participation in a statewide effort to identify, locate and evaluate children who are physically, mentally, communicatively or emotionally handicapped.

As Child Find director, Handschew works with the Department of Public Welfare, Department of Health, local education agencies, physicians, ministers and other individuals to identify and locate children aged three through 21 both in school and out of school who may need special education services.

Once a referral is made, it is her responsibility to ensure that referral-to-placement procedures are followed.

Briefly, the process involves the following activities:

Prior to evaluation, a parent information booklet, privacy rights, confidentiality procedures, school district policies, educational options and rights of the student are explained to parents.

After parental consent is obtained, a non-discriminatory evaluation is conducted in five areas:

physical, language/speech, social/behavioral, emotional and educational.

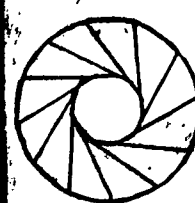

If a problem is noted in one or more of the above, the student is further evaluated by qualified personnel.

Before an eligible student is placed in a special education program, parents must consent to the placement and an individual education program is developed for the student.

All students who receive special education services are reassessed at least once a year, Handschew said.

"Early identification of children who need special educational experiences is most important," Handschew emphasized.

St. Ann-St. John Carnival Association frolics at tenth annual Bal Masque

Reigning as King and Queen of the St. Ann - St. John 10th annual Carnival Bal Masque were Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Garcia of Clermont Harbor.

Theme of this year's ball was "A Salute to New Orleans 1984 - Mardi Gras and The World's Fair."

Only in New Orleans can the rich tradition of Mardi Gras be interwoven with hope for new wonders to come.

Their majesties, King Fritz and Queen Joyce, ruled from the stage which was transformed into a picturesque setting of old New Orleans featuring historic St. Louis Cathedral and Jackson Square while capturing some of the charm of the world famous Vieux Carre.

Queen Joyce was radiant in her royal gown fashioned with a fitted bodice of silver brocade featuring a rounded neckline and three quarter sleeves.

Her majesty's waist was accented with a self sash. The royal skirt of taffeta was overlaid with full, softly gathered white chiffon.

Accenting her regal attire was a black velvet cathedral length train edged in silver and gold with scrolls of gold sequins.

The center motif of the train was the applied gold letters "SA" brilliantly outlined with gold sequins.

Her jewelry included a rhinestone tiara, necklace and earrings. To complete her attire the queen wore silver evening gloves and silver slippers.

Green, gold and purple are the Rex colors and so attractive a combination are they, that they have become the colors of Carnival itself, chosen by Rex, the King of Carnival in 1872.

It wasn't until 20 years later, Rex came up with the symbolism of his royal colors and that symbolism holds good after all these years.

Maids in her majesty's court, each gowned in a "Symbolism of Color," were Mrs. Marcos Filos wearing green for Faith, Mrs. Bertram Courrege in gold for Power, Mrs. Frank McNeil in a gown of purple for Justice and as an emphasis on Justice, Miss Tina Filos wearing a lavender ball gown.

Train bearers for her majesty were Anna Gail Anselmo, daughter of Mrs. Debbie McNeil and Mr. Don Anselmo, Chere Ladner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Ladner and Dara Seal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Seal.

King Fritz was elegantly attired in white tails and ruffled white shirt. His crown of gold and cardinal red velvet was encrusted with rhinestones. His mantle and sceptre matched his queen's.

Dukes to the King were Mr. Marcos Filos, Mr. Bertram Courrege, Mr. Frank McNeil and Mr. Tommy McNeil.

The gala affair opened with the presentation of kings and queens of the past nine years: 1975, Virginia Thomas; 1976, Gerald and Madonna Boos; 1978, Conrad and Marie Mauffray; 1979, Davis and Mary Caillier; 1980, Louis and Eunice Foret; 1982, James and Rita Davis; 1983, Buddy and Shirley Williams.

Ball captain, Mrs. Gloria Moran, attired in a sparkling headpiece and matching gown of purple, green and gold depicting "The Spirit of Mardi Gras," was presented by Mr. Tommy Filos, grand marshal.

The royal entertainment included two dance routines by Kathleen St. Romain.

Swan Dancers were presented by the Waveland Ballet Troupe, a group of fun-loving people from Waveland and New Orleans.

Included in the "troupe" and dressed in assorted colored tutus, tights and ladies wigs were Earl Barkemeyer, Gilbert Brechtel Jr., Gilbert Brechtel Sr., Talmage Conway, Joe Cuccia, Joe Roppolo and Bob Ortis.

Ladies of the troupe wearing tuxedo suits, black ties and top hats were Dottie Barkemeyer, Alice Brechtel, Esa Brechtel, Claire Conway, Beverly Coogan, Margaret Heitzmann, Anna Mae Roppolo and Jennie Ortis.

Each past and present royal couple was presented a lovely anniversary plaque as a memento of their reign as king and queen by Mrs. Alvin Ladner, organization officer.

Also receiving plaques for their untiring and faithful participation for the past ten years were Mr. Monroe James, narrator and Mrs. Gloria Moran, captain.

Receiving first place prize for best costumes were Arabians, Donald and Charlotte Mauffray, Conrad and Marie Mauffray, Lawrence Freeman and Robert McClure.

Second place prize was won by the "Ballet Group" and Third place winners were the Hobo Couple, Bud and Carmel Marziale.

General dancing followed the court's dance with music by the Country Roustabouts.

Stage setting was designed by Mr. Buddy Williams.

Officers of the Carnival Association are Mrs. A.M. Thomas, president; Mrs. Monroe James, vice-president; Mrs. Alvin Ladner, treasurer.

Chairpersons include Assistants to Royalty, Mrs. Leonard Rupp and Mrs. Frank Saucier; Door Committee, Mrs. Lelia Saleeby and Mrs. Ethel Ladner; refreshments, Mr. Alvin Ladner and Mr. Edward Kenmore.

Paulist preacher to lead OLG Lenten Renewal Mission

A Paulist Lenten Family Renewal Mission will begin this weekend at all the Sunday Masses at Our Lady of the Church Catholic Church, according to an announcement made by Father Francis Farrell, pastor.

From Monday through Friday mission services will be held daily at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. The evening services on Monday at 7 p.m. will consist of Mass and sermon on "The Bible - What Is It?"

On Tuesday evening there will be a Holy Hour with recitation of the Rosary, sermon on "Christ, The Man," distribution of Holy Communion and benediction.

On Wednesday Mass, sermon on "Reconciliation With God and Fellow Man" is planned. Thursday night's schedule includes Mass and sermon on "The Christian Vocation," and renewal of marriage vows.

The mission will close Friday with Mass, bestowal of the Papal Blessing, renewal of baptismal vows, and sermon on "How Can I Get To Heaven?"

On Thursday morning the administration of the Sacrament of the Sick will be conducted in conjunction with the Mass. A schedule of special talks for all teen-agers will be announced on Sunday.

The Lenten Holy Year Mission will be conducted by Father James J. Harrington, CSP, director of the Paulist Southern Preaching Apostolate with headquarters at Our Lady of Fatima Church in Prichard, Ala.

Father Harrington, a native of New York City, was ordained in New York in 1943.

After his ordination, he spent seven and one-half years preaching missions and retreats throughout the Pacific Northwest and Western Canada.

He was then assigned to Old St. Mary's Church in San Francisco's Chinatown and preached throughout Northern California and Nevada.

In 1983, he was appointed director of the Paulist Southern Preaching Apostolate with headquarters in Winchester, Tenn.

In the following year, the Preaching Apostolate was headquartered at St. Patrick's Church in Memphis, Tenn.

Since that time, Father Harrington has preached missions, retreats and Parish Renewal Programs from the Ohio River to the Gulf of Mexico and from the Texas border to the Eastern coast.

A most cordial invitation is extended to all to join in these days of study and prayer for peace and understanding, an OLG spokesman stated.

POINT OF LAW

Mississippi State Bar

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult an attorney when in doubt about your legal rights.)

Q: I have been living with my boyfriend for two years. We consider ourselves husband and wife and tell everyone we are married, but as far as tax reports are concerned, should partners of a common-law marriage be filing as married or single?

A: In Mississippi, common-law marriages are not recognized, and have not been recognized since 1966. Under Mississippi law, each of you is considered a single person.

Q: My husband and I were divorced after fifteen years of marriage. He was ordered to pay me alimony for five years, but has not. Can he be arrested for failure to pay alimony?

A: If he is under an order of court to pay alimony, and he has the ability to pay, failure to pay the alimony could expose him to contempt of court proceedings.

Once found in contempt, he may be put in jail. Since there is usually no structured sentence imposed, the court may keep him in jail for as long as it takes to convince him that he should pay the alimony.

St. Rose de Lima

Catholic Church

Parish News

By Rev. Bernard C. Keller, SVD

Jesus is God's word made flesh, the visible manifestation of the divine plan for our salvation. In him, we have the assurance of eternal life. We are on a Lenten journey to that goal.

Kindly remember in your prayers Khadija Ayo Ann Allen and Kamaria Taiwo Ann Allen, twin daughters of Charles Allen and Ancilla Curry, who were baptized at St. Rose last Sunday.

The second collection today is for the Catholic Missions among Black and native Americans.

Religious instructions will be given after the 9 a.m. Mass today for the students in grades 6, 7 and 8. First Communion class will be tomorrow at 3 p.m. The confirmation class will be Wednesday at 6:30 p.m.

Our 20th annual semi-pro basketball tournament is in its first of four weekends at the Seminary Gym. Games start on Saturday at 11 a.m. and on Sunday at noon. Admission: Adults $1.50, students (12 and over) $1, children (under 12) 50 cents.

We would like to thank the following parents who made our Family Portrait project a grand success: Golden Bell, Carol Daniels, Diane Duvernay, Charles Joseph III, Janice Saucier, Joan Thomas, and Jackie Whavers. Their children attending Bay Catholic Elementary benefit from this project.

Gospel Choir will practice on Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

This Wednesday the Lizana family will perform the service part of the liturgy of the Family Mass at 7:30 p.m.

Altar Society will hold its monthly meeting next Sunday in the rectory after the 9 a.m. Mass.

Next weekend the second collection will be for the Little Sisters of the Poor from Mobile, Ala. Sister John Mary will speak at the Saturday evening and Sunday morning Masses.

Thursday at 7:30 p.m., Sister Lauren will conduct the first of three Lenten Bible Studies in the Parish Center.

MASS SCHEDULE

—Sunday, 7 and 9 a.m. and 6 p.m.

—Daily, Monday through Saturday, 6:30 a.m.

—Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.

—Saturday (Vigil) 6 p.m.

—Mother of Perpetual Help Novena at beginning of Tuesday Mass.

—Way of Cross Devotion on Friday at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

—Confessions are heard half-hour before weekend Masses and upon request.

Parents must teach needed social skills

By Norine Barnes Child and Family Development Specialist Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Children go to school to learn their ABC's.

They learn to read them and write them, to put them together into words, sentences and stories. New words are opening to them as they acquire these "building blocks" of intellectual development.

But there is another set of building blocks that is fundamental for development.

These are the social skills of caring, cooperating, being friendly and appropriately assertive. These qualities are already developing in children before they go to school, and are more likely to be taught by parents than by teachers.

The opposite of these desirable social skills is aggressive behavior, characterized by a tendency toward hostile, cruel, injurious or destructive acts. Almost all children exhibit aggressive behavior in some form when they don't get their way. What parents consider an acceptable level of aggressive behavior will vary from family to family.

The general consensus is that ours is a violent society.

Where do successive generations learn this aggressive behavior? Lately much of the blame has been laid on TV, and rightly so. Yet the parental model, not TV, is the number one influence on a child.

Children from families where parents are angry, hostile, dissatisfied and unaccepting of the child tend to be more aggressive. Parents who are themselves violent or aggressive are likely to have aggressive children.

Children are clearly more impressed by what parents practice than by what they preach.

Ironically, parents often think they can stop their children's aggressiveness by beating it out of them. But by slapping, hitting or beating them, parents show children an even clearer model of aggression.

Although severe punishment can temporarily inhibit aggressive behavior in the parents' presence, it does nothing to correct the problem the rest of the time.

A child must be taught to be assertive, not aggressive, and to handle frustration appropriately.

When parents react to frustration constructively rather than aggressively, they provide a positive role model for the child.

Also, it is helpful if a parent explains the negative consequences of hostile behavior while suggesting positive options.

Discipline that is reasonable, firm, consistent and administered in a positive atmosphere is best.

A child who is allowed to express his anger, frustration or hurt verbally to an accepting adult is not likely to act out these emotions in an aggressive way.

HOW TO LOWER YOUR TAXES

The easiest way to lower your taxes is to open an Individual Retirement Account with us.

Then take your yearly IRA contributions off your federal taxable income! Every year you may contribute up to $2,000 toward your retirement.

Take advantage of this opportunity soon. You can still save on your Tax return by opening or adding to your IRA before you file, up to April 15.

MDED video spots emphasize good news

"Good News About Mississippi" is the message of the March audio and video spots distributed to statewide television and radio stations by the Mississippi Department of Economic Development.

The 60-second video spot presents a collection of the more important Mississippi stories that have been carried by national publications such as "The Wall Street Journal," "U.S. News and World Report" and "Design News," in addition to broadcast stories by network news and programs like "20/20."

According to George

Snyder, MDED Public Information Officer, some of the story segments included in the public service announcement were placed through the DED's national public relations program.

"We are in the second year of a communications program with the public relations firm, Burson-Marsteller," says Snyder, adding that one of the principal objectives of the program is distributing positive information about Mississippi to the national media.

The March video and audio spots catalog some of these efforts.

Security Savings among top 100 of 2007

Security Savings, one of the H. C. Bailey Companies, is among the top 100 savings institutions in the United States for loan service to other investors, according to a listing in the January issue of Savings Institutional magazine.

Out of 2,000 savings institutions nationwide, Security Savings ranked 97th in the nation with a loan service total of $466,733,654 as of June 30, 1983.

The listing was based on information filed in the semi-annual reports to the Federal Reserve Bank Board for the first six months of 1983.

According to H. C. (Buster) Bailey, Jr., President of Security Savings, "The company's success in providing a wide range of services was a major factor in its ranking."

Extension Home Economist Appreciation Week marked

The National Extension Home Economics Association observed the first week in March as "Extension Home Economist Appreciation Week."

"Those of us in the profession of home economics, and especially those of us in the Mississippi Association of Extension Home Economists, took this opportunity to acknowledge the valuable contribution being made to all of Mississippi by our colleagues in the Extension Service," said Frances Lester, president of the MAEHE.

The Extension Home Economists program is the largest adult education program in Mississippi.

Last year, 1,088,172 Mississippians attended seminars, workshops, demonstrations, lectures or classes, or were reached in their homes with a wide variety of information important to families and homemakers.

In 1983 consumer management specialists from the Extension Home Economics Department held 584 workshops and group meetings during which they taught community leaders, ministers and bankers how to provide financial counseling to those who come to them for help.

County Extension Home Economists carried the money management message to 19,884 more Mississippians. Families with young children and teen-agers often find it difficult to finance all the latest fashion fads.

Extension classes on sewing, tailoring, and recycling clothing were held 843 times during 1983 at locations throughout the state. More than 21,000 home-sewers attended.

In 1983 1,326 workshops in food and nutrition were held throughout the state to teach Mississippians the importance of balanced diets and how to achieve them. In addition, specialists and county Home Economists conducted 365 gardening workshops and 354 food preservation workshops. By growing and preserving their own food, families can stretch tight budgets. More than 72,000 people attended the nutrition, gardening and preservation workshops.

In addition to classes and workshops held on various topics at locations throughout the state on practically any given day of the year, the Extension Service coordinates the Extension Homemaker Clubs.

More than 13,000 Mississippi homemakers are members of Extension Homemaker Clubs, making the organization the largest adult organization in the state.

Members of Homemaker clubs donate time and labor to numerous civic projects in their communities.

If their time were valued at only minimum wage, the worth of their contributions, in time alone, would exceed $2.5 million annually.

"We in the MAEHE are inviting all Mississippians to join the more than one million of their fellow Mississippians who have taken part in and benefitted from the wide variety of programs offered by their Extension Home Economist," Mrs. Lester said.

State medical group endorses fee freeze

The Board of Trustees of the Mississippi State Medical Association has urged the 2,100 physician members of the organization to voluntarily freeze fees for one year, beginning immediately.

The action was announced by MSMA president Whitman B. Johnson, MD of Clarksdale, who reported that the association board last week endorsed the recommendation made earlier by the American Medical Association Board of Trustees.

In addition to the voluntary freeze, we are asking our members across the state to continue the profession's long-standing policy of waiving or reducing fees for those patients who face special financial difficulty—those who may be unemployed, uninsured, or covered by Medicaid.

"Medicare," Dr. Johnson said. "Most of the physicians in Mississippi will respond to the appeal for a fee freeze, he predicted, noting that the profession responded to a 1978 appeal issued for the same reasons—an interest in improving the economy and helping the people who suffer the effects of a recession."

"Although physicians' fees make up only 20 percent of the total cost of health care, this is one area where the profession can take a positive step for action," he remarked. "The fact that voluntary action can be effective is demonstrated by the successful 1978 effort during which the rise in physician fees was kept below the all-consumer price index," he concluded.

COMING EVENTS

GCJC to host welding seminar

A two-day seminar in welding technology and nondestructive testing will be conducted March 15-16 at Gulf Coast Junior College's Jackson County Campus at Gautier.

An open house will be held March 17 at the college in conjunction with the seminar.

"This seminar will be of interest to welders, technicians, engineers, designers, supervisors, inspectors, managers, sales and administrative personnel as well as quality assurance and quality control personnel who work in an environment controlled by welding metallurgical considerations," said seminar chairman Larry Pratt.

"Students of welding technology and nondestructive examination are also encouraged to attend," he said. The event is being sponsored jointly by the Pascagoula Section of the American Welding Society (AWS), the Gulf Coast Section of the American Society for Nondestructive Testing, Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College-Jackson County Campus and the Pascagoula Vot-ech Center.

Designed for those involved directly or indirectly in welding and nondestructive testing, the seminar will feature classroom activities, panel and laboratory sessions, film/slide presentations and current literature on welding/nondestructive testing.

Seminar coverage will include codes, standards and specifications; design/costs; control of material; welding processes; inspection processes; welding/nondestructive testing symbols and the welding inspector.

Twelve different program topics will be covered by experts from Mississippi and other states. Participants will receive an education certificate from the AWS.

Registration will be from 1 to 5 p.m. on March 14 and 7 to 8 a.m. on March 15 on the campus.

Fees are $30 for one day or $50 for two days for non-members, $25 for one day or $10 for two days for students with proof of enrollment.

Seminar hours will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 15 and 16. Additional laboratory demonstrations for welding and NDT processes will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. March 15. All events will be on campus.

For further information call Larry Pratt at 935-2609, John Tipton at 935-3512 or Phil Hunt at 782-5877.

RARE ANIMALS

The unusual wildlife sanctuary of professional gambler John Aspinall is in the spotlight in the "Festival '84" special program, "A Passion to Protect," at 9 p.m., Sunday, March 11 on Mississippi Education Television.

At Aspinall's house in the English countryside, tigers swim in the backyard pool, gazelles romp on the front lawn, chimpanzees swing on the porch and elephants saunter down the driveway. In 1956 it was in the cards—and in the dice—for Aspinall to be able to fulfill his life as well as to fulfill a lifetime dream of protecting wild animals.

Aspinall's sanctuary has one of the world's largest collections of rare animals. A herd of Mongolian horses constitutes the largest collection of wild horses in captivity in the world. Additionally, Aspinall's wild kingdom boasts of rare breeding and cohabitation achievements. The sanctuary is home to 500 animals from 79 different species.

"Festival '84" is a period of special programming designed to increase viewer awareness of public television.

PURLIE'S BACK

Melba Moore, Robert Guillaume and Sherman Hemsley star in the "Great Performances" presentation of "Purlie" at 8 p.m., Monday, March 12 on Mississippi ETV.

Melba Moore recreates the role of Lutie Belle, which catapulted her to stardom; Robert Guillaume, who starred as Purlie in the national company, plays Purlie in this production; and Sherman Hemsley recreates his role of the sly overseer Gittlow for this production also.

Based on Ossie Davis' play "Purlie Victorious," the original "Purlie" opened in 1970 to widespread critical acclaim on the Broadway stage. "Purlie" takes place on a Georgia plantation. It recounts the hilarious efforts of the cotton pickers, headed by their preacher Purlie, to pull a fast one on the bigoted, oppressive "Ol' Cap'n," played by Brandon Maggart.

USM workshop to focus on Robert's Rules of Order

The University of Southern Mississippi is offering a workshop in Parliamentary Procedure at its Jackson County center in Gautier at 7 p.m. on Thursday, April 5 through 24.

The workshop, to assist officers of civic, governmental, cultural and business organizations in using parliamentary procedure, has no prerequisites. Anyone may enroll.

The non-credit workshop will be taught by USM faculty member Dr. Robert Burr American Institute of Parliamentarians who serves as Parliamentarian for many state, regional and national organizations.

The four-week workshop will provide ten hours of instruction.

Textbook for the course will be "Robert's Rules of Order." Students who do not have a copy of the text may purchase one at the first class meeting for $5. Organization officers who enroll for the workshop are invited to bring a copy of their constitution and bylaws. The workshop will assist them in using their bylaws to conduct meetings.

Special emphasis will be placed on the preparation of minutes.

The workshop will combine lectures, class discussions and actual practice in parliamentary procedure.

Those interested in registering for Parliamentary Procedure should contact the Department of Conferences, USM Gulf Park Campus, Long Beach, 39560, phone 865-4506.

ETV Brief

RICE FARMING

Production and marketing techniques that will benefit Mississippi rice farmers in the upcoming year will be presented on "Farmweek," the television series for the state's farmers, at 7:30 p.m. Monday, March 12, on Mississippi ETV.

Experts will talk with reporters about new strategies for the rice-growing season and about potential insect and weed problems and ### new solutions for them.

Included on each weekly "Farmweek" program are the weather forecasts for the upcoming week, farm news, market reports, a feature report, specific advice for producers of various commodities and a calendar of upcoming agricultural events in the state. The series is co-produced by Mississippi ETV and the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

By Katy
McGuire
Caire

Now that the merriment and madness of Mardi Gras is over until next year, the pace slows during the Lenten season for most of us.

Although Lenten regulations for most are far less stringent than in other years, many of us still turn to meatless menus during most of Lent.

That's no penance at all for us on the Gulf Coast, with all the wonderful seafood, is it? I hear that the fish are biting better, for one thing. And what better dishes could you ask than a good seafood gumbo or crawfish bisque or fried oysters or boiled crabs and so on?

But on a day when you're not abstaining from meat, why not cook up a tasty Chicken Gumbo, Cajun style? I hadn't cooked this in a while, but got hungry for some after seeing some TV shots of the 'Coursir du Mardi Gras'—the 'Running of the Mardi Gras'—the celebration in Mamou, deep in South Louisiana's Cajun Country, a riotously merry tradition which has been observed there ever since the 19th century.

The whole community joins in the fun, as masked horsemen ride through the countryside asking 'donations' of chickens from the farmers—the farmers toss the chickens into the air, and the riders catch them.

Then it's back to the open air cookfire, where the chickens are turned into a tasty, huge gumbo.

There, everyone shares in the bounty, with more chickens added to the pot as they are brought in.

So, if you're in the neighborhood of Mamou, La. next year at Mardi Gras, stop by and join in the fun.

Until then, try my version of Cajun Chicken Gumbo with Oysters. Here's:

CHICKEN-OYSTER GUMBO

1 stewing chicken (or fryer) cut up

¼ cup fat or oil

1 cup chopped onion

¼ cup minced parsley

3 Tablsp. flour

2 quarts hot water

1 bay leaf

1 pt. oysters, with juice

Pepper, salt, hot pepper sauce to taste

File (fee-lay) powder, optional

Fry the chicken till light brown, remove, and add to the grease left in the pot enough flour to make a roux. When medium brown, add onions, cooking until transparent. Add the chicken and water, and cook slowly until the chicken is tender.

Add bay leaf, parsley and seasonings and simmer for about ten minutes longer. Add the oysters along with their liquor and cook slowly just until the oysters curl at the edges.

When serving, if desired, sprinkle a teaspoon of file into each bowl to thicken. Serve over rice, of course, in a bowl. (Eight servings).

P.S. I like my gumbo thick, so if it seems not thick enough, I just cook it down some more.

Rural Mississippian gives biscuit lesson

There's a saying in rural Mississippi. "Ain't nothing difficult for them what knows how to do it."

When it comes to making biscuits Mrs. Parker Gray of Lauderdale County is one of them what know how.

Mrs. Gray was the oldest of several children. When babies continued to arrive she was pressed into service helping with breakfast.

"My stepmother was having her little ones. She had just had her second child and I was about nine years old. My daddy told me one morning, 'you're going to have to get up and help me get some breakfast,' he said, 'I can't plow without some breakfast.'"

So we got in the kitchen that morning, I remember it real well, and he helped me get all the stuff out. I had seen my mother make biscuits, but I never had made them before.

Well, I made them and got them in the stove. Of course, we had a wood stove. And when they came out, oh, I was really ashamed of them—embarrassed—'cause they were big and they were cracked. They just didn't look like hers.

"But daddy ate them," Mrs. Gray recalled.

By the time she got to the ninth grade Mrs. Gray was the best biscuit maker in Lauderdale County. She has a blue ribbon to prove it.

Here's how she described her method to more than 1,000 onlookers during the Back to Basics festival in Meridian recently.

"Take a bowl three to five quarts and fill it three-fourths full of self-rising flour."

"And then I have a cup of buttermilk, or you can use sweet milk. I don't see any difference if you take them out of the stove and serve them hot. But if you let them get cold the buttermilk is the best."

"Okay, I have my cup of milk sitting there ready to use. And I take my four fingers and stick my four fingers down in the can (of shortening) and I get what I can get up on those four fingers."

"Now if you wanted to measure it I would say, just looking at it, that it would be about two heaping tablespoons," Mrs. Gray said.

"I make me a well in that flour. Don't go all the way to the bottom of the bowl because when you pour your liquid in there it will stick to the bowl. So just make a well in there that will take care of the shortening. Then I pour in half of that cup of milk."

"Then I mix that up real good. Just keep mixing it and it'll get just as soft it'll feel like silk. And then I pour the other milk in there and just keep mixing it up until I get it all mixed up."

"Every once in a while, while I'm mixing it I'll let it kind of go around and pick up more flour," Mrs. Gray said.

Forcing more flour into the biscuit dough will make the dough too stiff.

"Then I clean my hands off real good and then I just pinch the biscuits off. Of course Jerry Clower would say you 'choke them off,'" Mrs. Gray said.

The pinched end is dipped in the flour and the pinch of dough is then rolled in the palm of one hand between the fingers of the other until it is round.

One observer described Mrs. Gray's method as resembling a spider standing on its tip-toes over a marble. The pinches of dough Mrs. Gray used in her demonstration were about the size of a plum.

The rounded pinches of dough are then arranged on a greased cast iron baker and put in a preheated 425 F oven for 15 to 20 minutes.

The flour remaining in the bowl should be sifted to remove pieces of dough, and can be covered and stored in the refrigerator until the next time biscuits are on the menu.

During the festival Mrs. Gray made, baked and served more than 450 biscuits, mostly to avowed biscuit dislikers, without a single complaint.

TOLERANT OF LOCAL
AIR POLLUTANTS
Homeowners choosing trees for landscaping might do well, especially in more industrialized areas, to keep in mind that some trees are more resistant to harm from air pollution than others.
Hardwoods—that is, deciduous trees—are generally more tolerant of air pollution because they shed their leaves annually, thus get a new start every year with fresh leaves.
Evergreens, on the other hand, replace their foliage only over a period of years and may suffer premature needle loss from pollution, leading to weakening of the tree which, in turn, may invite attack by insects and/or disease.

The jury is still out on the effects of the phenomenon known as 'acid rain.' So far, no documented adverse effects on trees from acid rain here in Mississippi have been reported, but it may be too soon to tell. Meantime, the potential for harm has been recognized, and studies will continue.
Several types of pollution have been identified as harmful to certain trees, including fluoride, sulfur dioxide and ozone, so the homeowner who lives in an area with any of these should check with a local forester, nurseryman or agricultural extension service agent to find out which trees are most tolerant to local types of pollution before selecting trees to use in the landscape.

SANDY GIRL—Striking an inquisitive pose is this female, sandy-colored puppy named Annabelle who is about six-months-old and appears to be part Labrador. She is a stray picked up on St. John Street in Bay St. Louis and now housed at the Hancock County Animal Shelter on Gulfside Drive in Waveland. But unless Annabelle is quickly adopted, she will soon be painlessly destroyed. For adoption information please telephone the Bay-Waveland Humane Society volunteer at 467-4230 Monday, Wednesday or Friday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Tuesday from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Thursday from noon until 3 p.m.; or Saturday from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

Labels can mislead wishful consumers

The label on a jar of spaghetti sauce may proclaim that it is "thicker."
But that doesn't answer the question, "thicker than what?"
And how did it get to be thicker?

The Food and Drug Administration controls the manner in which nutritional claims are made in the advertising and labeling of foods, but many words consumers associate with superior quality have nothing to do with nutrition.

"Anything can be advertised as being 'all natural,' since there is no official definition of the word 'natural,'" according to Dr. Charles Shannon, food technologist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

The laws governing labeling and advertising of food began with the Pure Food and Drug Act of 1906. The Act is revised occasionally and is amended frequently.

Two recent amendments govern use of such phrases as 'low in calories' and 'low salt.' "A product that is labeled in a manner that would suggest it contains fewer calories than a similar product prepared normally must list the serving size and number of servings per container. Each serving must contain no more than 40 calories," Shannon said.

"That's what the government decided 'low in calories' meant—no more than 40 calories a serving. In some products the so-called low calorie brand could contain just as many calories as the regular brand."

"The regulations governing use of the phrase 'low salt' require that the product actually contain less salt than a similar product prepared in the usual manner," Shannon said.

"There are rules about use of the words 'diet' and 'dietetic' but there are none concerning use of the word 'light,' he said. Shannon advised consumers to read the list of ingredients on the back of food labels.

"For years the law has required that ingredients of a food be listed in descending order."

"That means if one brand of spaghetti sauce says it's thicker but the ingredients list shows water and corn starch as the first two ingredients, you might be better off to buy a brand that doesn't say anything about being thick but lists tomatoes as the first ingredient," Shannon said.

Shannon said most companies are not trying to be deceptive.

If a product is advertised as being thicker, it probably is thicker than that company's other or previous product. The thickness may have been achieved through the addition of starches, however.

"You're not likely to see a product advertised as having more starch, or a moister product being advertised as having more water," Shannon said.

"The producers leave it up to the consumer to assume that a thicker tomato sauce must contain more tomatoes."

HUSKY PUPPIES—These two adorable puppies named Chip and Dale were found starving on the roadside recently and are now at the Hancock County Animal Shelter on Gulfside Drive in Waveland. They were found with a punctured stomach and are being treated for it. The puppies are being kept in a warm, dry place until they can be adopted. For adoption information please telephone the Bay-Waveland Humane Society volunteer at 467-4230 Monday, Wednesday or Friday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Tuesday from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Thursday from noon until 3 p.m.; or Saturday from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)
